Two Technopark incubated companies — MobMe and Light Logics Holography and Optics Ltd — have won national awards for their respective innovations. MobMe won the Nasscom award 2008 for the most innovative start-up and the Indian Science and Technology Entrepreneurs Parks and Business Incubators Association (ISBA) award for the best start-up ICT company of 2008. Light Logics won the ISBA award for the best start-up engineering company of 2008.

MobMe is a two-year-old technology start-up incubated by the Technopark Business Incubation (TBI) initiative founded by a bunch of engineering students while in their college. The company won the award for its flagship product, Mobshare.in, which is a mobile contents sharing platform and distribution network. Its enterprise solution today powers CNN-IBN's and Mid-Day's Mobile Citizen Journalism initiative, among others.

Light Logics is a business initiative of a group of scientists and engineers with long years of experience in holographic imaging. The company manufactures and sells core machines for holographic imaging, master security holograms, vibrant display holograms and a range of intelligent and strategic holographic products of international quality.
